CONTENT

There's a lot going on in this play book. Something is creeping and crawling everywhere. In the forest, the ants are working on their anthill, insects are flying and jumping from plant to plant, the frog in the pond is catching a yummy fly and the glow-worms are flitting around in the evening. There's something exciting to discover among the little creepy-crawlies on every page. Behind flaps, on sliders and using dials, children can explore many different native animals. The versatile play effects casually promote the little ones' fine motor skills and actively involve children in what's going on. Brief factual texts provide basic information about the various animals.
