- Realistic illustrations allow children to experience nature up close
- Charming read-aloud stories for little nature explorers

CONTENT

The little rabbit and its siblings live in a hollow tree trunk on the edge of the forest. Today, the little rabbit explores its surroundings, even venturing closer to the farm and encountering other animals. In the evening, after many exciting adventures, it returns to its mum and the safety of their burrow. A charming read-aloud story with catchy text for little nature explorers.

THE ILLUSTRATOR

Gerda Muller was born in Holland in 1926; she was educated at the École des Arts Décoratifs in Amsterdam and at Paul Colin's studio in Paris. She then spent about ten years working on the "Albums du Père Castor" and another five on "Pomme d'Api". These days, she works for multiple publishers and has produced a large number of albums and posters for children's rooms.

Gerda Muller often interrupts her illustration work to create designs, lithographs and paintings. Large parts of her works have also been published abroad. She began to participate in exhibitions about ten years ago and has won multiple awards.

Gerda Muller has two grown daughters and lives in Paris.
